

My name is Donald (Don) Salcito. My wife, Catherine, and I have owned our home in Cordillera (The Divide) since 2010. We also have a home in Englewood, Colorado. We enjoy Cordillera's natural beauty and the community in general. I cycle in Cordillera, through the Ranch to the Summit and the Territories. I'm the very slow guy on the blue Pinarrello, breathing hard and crawling up the hills.

While my professional background is in law, Catherine and I moved to Colorado in 1979 because of my interest in public lands and public land management. I've been a securities lawyer for over 40 years and have worked in corporate finance, enforcement actions before the U. S. Securities and Exchange Commission, securities class action defense litigation and most recently pooled investment vehicles (Investment Advisor and Mutual Funds).

I'm currently an arbitration judge for FINRA, and serve as an election judge in Eagle County, where I also vote.

If my skills as a mediator and problem solver are of value, I am interested in giving back to the community and serving on the CPOA Board. One of my goals would be to increase the productive joint work of the CPOA and CMD boards for the good of the Cordillera community.

I grew up in Connecticut and graduated from the University of Connecticut with a B.A. in History and Philosophy in 1975. In 1979, I received my J. D. from the University of Arizona while also clerking with the Arizona Attorney General's Office and the U. S. Attorney's Office. I've been a partner in the Denver office of several national law firms, taught various law classes at the University of Denver College of Law, and served on the board of directors and as an executive of a NYSE Member broker/dealer and a registered investment adviser.

Catherine and I have three wonderful daughters, and four beautiful grandchildren. Cordillera is our favorite family gathering spot.
